Chapter 2 by Suzi Rowsell

The console twitches in his hand, Wren jumps back.

"Duuuuuude, what was in that coke?!"

i laughed,"Lol, it was just coke"

The green Xbox logo started flashing red.

Chapter 3 by SaintSayaka

"You should probably get a new system," Wren says, shaking his head. I choose not to chastise him, but inside, I'm steamed. He knows how much I cherish my original XBOX, to the point where our very friendship hinged on its continued existence. After a scuffle that ended in an unfortunate house egging and a few choice words from our middle school's principal, Wren had agreed to mod a 360 controller to work on my XBOX. This ruled out his excuse that his hands were "unfit" for an old system's controller, and made him oh so nicely, unfairly good at Halo. I had a technical genius AND a teabagger.

So when the light began flashing, I knew it was a sign of imminent doom, but being the owner of such an old system, I was used to its little handicaps by now. Sure, this was new, but the XBOX was a resilient system. It would get over it. That's why I fell in love with it to begin with.

Chapter 4 by Mick swager

but every night it was red. I was not going to get rid of it because it was my most important thing in my house. I was playing one night when out of nowhere I just dropped the controller and went down stares. I was trying to stop my self but I could not whatever was makeing me do this made me grab a rolling pin and walk out side to my nighobrs house I walked in I was trying to fight it so hard but I could not. I went up stares and wacked my nighbor on the head and walked out just as tears form in my eyes.

Chapter 5 by Loey_

I walked back into my house and screamed.
For a brief second, I remained stock still,
then whatever was making me do this stopped.
Shivers ran up my back.
I couldn't move, I felt paralyzed.
Hot tears were running down my checks. I started to tremble, and my whole body gave out.
the last thing I remembered was the flashing red light on my Xbox console.
